According to American College Testing (ACT), one in every four college students leaves before completing their sophomore year and nearly half of all freshmen will either drop out before obtaining a degree or complete their college education elsewhere. This is why developing a comprehensive agenda for the First Year Experience (FYE) is important. Many schools build into their curriculum first-year seminars or other programs that are developed to collaboratively promote student access, success, and excellence. FYI: It's About FYE will showcase various FYE program methods and their effectiveness in retaining and enhancing student performance and retention.
