As focus has shifted onto student retention and completion, colleges around the country are making changes to their advising and counseling student pathways. This second part of the two part series on the first-year student experience explores what successful advising and counseling programs have done to retain significantly more first-year students and usher them to a completed degree or certification. You will hear about an initiative where resources and experiences of community colleges state wide were pooled together, representing an enrollment of over 316,000 students.
